MIND YOUR MENTAL HEALTH

December is National Stress-Free Family Holidays Month

Approximately 64 percent of people say their mental health stress level increases exponentially around this time of year. If the holidays stress you out, perhaps it's time to create new family traditions that take the pressure off. This national campaign encourages families to simplify and scale down expectations so that the holidays are more peaceful and focused on the things that are important. Consider the following tips for keeping the strain of the season at bay.

- Don't strive for the "perfect" holidays. Be realistic about what you can do during this time; simplify wherever possible. Ask for help with tasks. Gracefully decline some invitations and look after yourself.
- Create some new, more practical traditions. If the same old family holiday rituals have become a burden for you, try celebrating in new ways.
- Prioritize your health. Maintain as regular a schedule as possible throughout the holidays. Don't skimp on sleep. If you have a workout plan, stay with it. This will help you moderate stress and burn extra calories.

MANAGER ARTICLE AND TIPS

Bringing out the best in your team

If you're looking for ways to help your staff members perform at their best, consider using some tried-and-true management practices.

- Impart clear goals. If you expect optimal productivity from team members, make sure they understand their performance targets in detail.
- Keep them in the loop. Regularly share information on organizational trends and changes. Remind your staff how their work contributes to the organization's mission and success.
- Reward innovations. Give team members the latitude to introduce new methods and seek solutions that boost efficiency. Reward those who develop true innovations.
- Learn their lane. If you get to know your employees' interests, skillsets, and personal preferences, you can tailor their workload to maximize production.
- Praise generously. If your department gains an accolade, don't take credit personally. Single out your staff who contributed.
