Growing Your Personal and Professional Resilience

EAP Training Event

Thursday,
May 2, 2024

10:00 - 11:00 a.m.

Training Description

No one is immune from loss, trauma or significant stressors. We typically can't control when these things happen. However, we can control how we respond, adapt and grow from challenges and adversity. In this training, participants will explore what it means to be resilient and why it is so important. They will privately explore and identify their personal or professional challenges and stressors. Finally, they will review resilience characteristics, learn how to grow them to adapt to and overcome challenges and leave having started their own Personal Resilience Plan.

Learning Objectives

- Learn the definition of resilience and why it is so important
- Review characteristics of resilient people
- Understand ways to build resilience
- Develop your own personal resilience plan
